

Jules Morgan and her 12 string guitar

Jules is a singer songwriter and guitarist, born in the Gladstone area of Peterborough in October 1962. In 1971, Jules' family emigrated to South Africa, where she learned to play guitar, and became influenced by the sounds of Cape Town. Jules returned to Peterborough in 1989, where she began a career in public relations and copywriting.

Passionate about music, in 2005 Jules began writing her own songs, influenced by her muse and civil partner Jo. During this time Jules has written and composed many songs about the twists and turns of life and hopes that the messages within her songs will touch and influence people positively.

During the past ten years, Jules has played in local bands, sung solo at festivals such as Peterborough's City Roots, Grassroots and London's Wharfstock. Jules and her songs have featured on local community radio Peterborough FM, and she has become well known on the Peterborough music scene for starting and hosting the very popular Cherry Tree open mic night, designed to provide a platform for local musicians. Jules will be performing at next year's Riverside Festival in Stamford.

Someday Sunday is Jules' first EP - Jules will be recording an album of songs at Nepenthe Studios, Kingscliffe, to launch during 2012.

Song tracks:

Bells - about hearing the bells of St Guthlac's on the way to church on Sunday mornings
